

SETTLING THE MATTER

The two British sailors had secured tickets to the dog show and were gazing upon a Skye terrier which had so much hair that it looked more like a woolen rug than a dog.

"W'ich end is 'is 'ead, BH?" asked one.

"Blowed if I know," was the reply. "But 'ere, I'll stick a pin in 'im and you look w'ich end barks."—Ladies' Home Journal.

PANNING HIM

One Sunday morning three prominent members of a church walked home together discussing the sermon.

"I tell you," said the first, enthusiastically, "Dr. Blink can certainly dive deeper into truth than any preacher I ever heard."

"Y-e-s," said the second man, "and he can stay under longer."

"Yes," said the third, "and come up drier."

GOOD BET

"I'll bet ye my father can lick your father."

"All right. I'll bet ye. When'll we pull the strap off?"—Life.

new york.—sumtimes little sammy smollen dont pay very good attention to what the teacher is saying and to what the other kids are reciting.

that is mostly why he is always getting in bad with miss hollins

miss hollins is the teacher of the 4th grade up in harlem

the other day i heard all about it from another kid

one of the smart girls in the class was telling all what she knew about hominy which as most peeple know is made out of corn

this girl who's name is jessy smith set down after she had told all about hominy as i said before then miss hollins hopped on sammy sammy, she says, did you hear what jessy said about hominy yessin, answers back sammy, who never paid no attention to what jessy had recked at all well then, says miss hollins, seeing as you herd it all, will you give a centense in which you bring in the word hominy korrekctly.

sammy stands up and fidjts around until the teecher asks him whats the matter sammy i thought you herd what jessy has told the class

then sammy takes another start and makes his centense

this is what it was hominy marbles have you

HIS MISTAKE

"How did the cashier of your bank get into jail?"

"Left the 'r' off speculation."